

4c COMMUNICATING WITH FAMILIES

Although the ability of families to participate in their child's learning varies widely because of other family or job obligations, it is the responsibility of teachers to provide opportunities for them to understand both the instructional program and their child's progress. Teachers establish relationships with families by communicating to them about the instructional program, conferring with them about individual students, and inviting them to be part of the educational process itself. The level of family participation and involvement tends to be greater at the elementary level, when young children are just beginning school. However, the importance of regular communication with families of adolescents cannot be overstated. A teacher's effort to communicate with families conveys the teacher's essential caring, valued by families of students of all ages.

The elements of component 4c are:

Information about the instructional program

The teacher frequently provides information to families about the instructional program.

Information about individual students

The teacher frequently provides information to families about students' individual progress.

Engagement of families in the instructional program

The teacher frequently and successfully offers engagement opportunities to families so that they can participate in the learning activities.

Indicators include:

- Frequent and culturally appropriate information sent home regarding the instructional program and student progress
- Two-way communication between the teacher and families
- Frequent opportunities for families to engage in the learning process

UNSATISFACTORY • LEVEL 1

The teacher provides little information about the instructional program to families; the teacher's communication about students' progress is minimal. The teacher does not respond, or responds insensitively, to parental concerns.

CRITICAL ATTRIBUTES

- Little or no information regarding the instructional program is available to parents.
- Families are unaware of their children's progress.
- Family engagement activities are lacking.
- There is some culturally inappropriate communication.

POSSIBLE EXAMPLES

- A parent says, "I'd like to know what my kid is working on at school."
- A parent says, "I wish I could know something about my child's progress before the report card comes out."
- A parent says, "I wonder why we never see any schoolwork come home."
- And others...

BASIC • LEVEL 2

The teacher makes sporadic attempts to communicate with families about the instructional program and about the progress of individual students but does not attempt to engage families in the instructional program. Moreover, the communication that does take place may not be culturally sensitive to those families.

- School- or district-created materials about the instructional program are sent home.
- The teacher sends home infrequent or incomplete information about the instructional program.
- The teacher maintains a school-required gradebook but does little else to inform families about student progress.
- Some of the teacher's communications are inappropriate to families' cultural norms.

- A parent says, "I received the district pamphlet on the reading program, but I wonder how it's being taught in my child's class."
- A parent says, "I emailed the teacher about my child's struggles with math, but all I got back was a note saying that he's doing fine."
- The teacher sends home weekly quizzes for parent or guardian signature.
- And others...

PROFICIENT • LEVEL 3

The teacher provides frequent and appropriate information to families about the instructional program and conveys information about individual student progress in a culturally sensitive manner. The teacher makes some attempts to engage families in the instructional program.

- The teacher regularly makes information about the instructional program available.
- The teacher regularly sends home information about student progress.
- The teacher develops activities designed to engage families successfully and appropriately in their children's learning.
- Most of the teacher's communications are appropriate to families' cultural norms.

- The teacher sends a weekly newsletter home to families that describes current class activities, community and/or school projects, field trips, etc.
- The teacher creates a monthly progress report, which is sent home for each student.
- The teacher sends home a project that asks students to interview a family member about growing up during the 1950s.

DISTINGUISHED • LEVEL 4

The teacher communicates frequently with families in a culturally sensitive manner, with students contributing to the communication. The teacher responds to family concerns with professional and cultural sensitivity. The teacher's efforts to engage families in the instructional program are frequent and successful.

- Students regularly develop materials to inform their families about the instructional program.
- Students maintain accurate records about their individual learning progress and frequently share this information with families.
- Students contribute to regular and ongoing projects designed to engage families in the learning process.
- All of the teacher's communications are highly sensitive to families' cultural norms.

- Students create materials for Back-to-School Night that outline the approach for learning science.
- Each student's daily reflection log describes what she or he is learning, and the log goes home each week for review by a parent or guardian.
- Students design a project on charting their family's use of plastics.
- And others...
